

EUROPEAN FINANCIAL ACTORS IN EXTERNAL AID

Preface

The European Commission is increasingly relying on the Member States' Development Finance institutions to carry out infrastructure, energy and city projects in low and middle income-countries worldwide. These projects are no longer funded with EU grants, but through blended financial instruments that have a grant component. With blending on the rise, European Development Financing Institutions are growing steadily and becoming key players of the European External Action. This leaflet provides an overview of the four main Public Development Financing Institutions in Europe, and is a useful tool for the European External Aid Committee to follow their evolution and contribute to the dialogue with Multilateral Development Banks through FIDIC. It is also a good source of information for Member Associations in their interaction with Development Institutions in their home countries and for companies doing business with European development funds.

We hope this effort will be useful for all engineers and consultants, but also our partners in the construction industry.
